For more information, please see the University Catalog section titled "Graduate Admissions."

III. Culminating Experience Plan

As they begin their graduate program, each student needs to consider a culminating experience plan for their studies. With guidance from the graduate program advisor and documented with a faculty mentor in the area of specialization, this should be done soon after beginning coursework.

Three main plans are offered:

PLAN I, in which the student must pass written comprehensive examinations in two of the following fields:

- American history;
- European history;
- Latin American, Asian, African, or Middle Eastern history;
- World history.

PLAN II, in which one specific field of interest is developed and requires a written thesis, with an oral examination taken before the final draft. Only those who have demonstrated superior writing and research skills are allowed into the thesis track (3.4 GPA after completing 15 units of coursework excluding internship and editing classes).

PLAN III, in which one specific field of interest within the area of Oral, Public, or Digital History is developed. This plan requires the creation of an original research project which can take several forms (including digital, written, or visual). Those who wish to complete their degree with an emphasis in Public History must follow this plan.

Any questions not addressed in the following pages or on the program's web page should be directed to the Department of History main office at (657) 278-3474 or the program advisors, listed on the department website at hist.fullerton.edu.

Frequently Asked Questions

Find more on our program web page here.

Is the M.A. in History right for me?

The master's program in history is best suited for individuals who:

- (1) have or are working toward a social studies credential.
- (2) are planning on pursuing a PhD after the master's degree.
- (3) would like to work in oral/public history, i.e. an archival or museum setting.
- (4) are interested in their own personal accomplishment. Often, this would be someone who is a non-traditional or "returning" student.
- (5) would like to teach at the community college level.

NOTE: it is difficult to get a full-time teaching position at that level with a master's degree for two main reasons: (a) community colleges prioritize hiring History PhDs, and (b) most community college teaching positions are hired on a part-time basis.

What are the deadline dates to apply to the program?

The deadline dates for our program are: March 1st for fall admission and November 1st for spring admission. Please note that international students have a Spring Admission deadline of October 1st.

Do I need to send transcripts to the History Department?

Official transcripts must be sent directly to the Office of Admissions*. Transcripts submitted to the History department will not be accepted toward your application. For more information on how to submit your transcripts, please visit the Office of Admissions website or call (657) 278-3100.

Current CSUF students or alumni are not required to request official transcripts from CSUF.*

Can I be admitted into the program if I did not get my bachelor's degree in History?

Applicants from all disciplines who are interested in pursuing History are welcome to apply to the master's program. If you received your undergraduate degree in a subject other than history, we highly encourage you to submit a writing sample in addition to your Statement of Purpose. Non-History majors may be conditionally admitted and asked to complete one or more specified courses prior to beginning graduate level work.

Is the GRE required?

GRE Test scores are not required in the History MA application.

What are the GPA requirements?

You should have at least a 3.0 GPA in your last 60 units of coursework and a 3.0 in your upper-division history courses or in the upper-division courses in your major.

What should be included in the Statement of Purpose?

As part of your application to the History program, you are required to submit a Statement of Purpose. Please discuss the following carefully and thoughtfully, in 600-1,000 words:

- (1) What are your goals in pursuing an M.A. degree at CSUF? Do you want to enhance existing social studies teaching credentials or work toward teaching at the community college level? Are you more interested in Public and Oral history where you would work in a museum or archival setting, or is this more of a personal goal that you hope to accomplish?
- (2) What are your areas of interest geographically (U.S., European, Asian, World), chronologically (ancient, medieval, modern), and/or topically (women's history, military history, etc.)? How did you become interested in the field? You may want to mention books that have been especially influential in shaping your interests.
- (3) Alert us of any anomalies in your record. For example, if your GPA is below a 3.0 you should explain why the graduate advisor should still consider your application. Alternately, let us know if you have any academic awards or honors.

Do I need letters of recommendation?

As part of your application to the History MA program, you are required to submit two letters of recommendation through the Cal State Apply system, but may submit up to three requests for a letter of recommendation. We recommend submitting all three available requests to ensure at least two letters of recommendation are received prior to the application deadline.

If you have already requested your letters of recommendation, please advise your recommenders that they will receive an email from "calstateapply@liaisoncas.com" with a link to submit a confidential letter of reference. Please also inform your recommenders to "be on the lookout" for this email in their inbox and in their spam or junk folders. Recommenders must submit their recommendations in Cal State Apply. Any letters of recommendation submitted elsewhere will not be accepted toward your History MA program application.

Frequently check your application portal to ensure letters have been submitted and contact those recommenders who have yet to complete the recommendation. If your recommenders do not submit letters by the application deadline, your application will be marked incomplete and will not be reviewed.

How long does it take to complete the program?

Our program is designed to be completed in 2 ½ years or 5 semesters if a student enrolls in a minimum of 6 units per semester.

Can I attend part-time or must I attend full-time?

You may attend full-time or part-time. Part-time is defined as taking 3-6 units per semester and full-time is defined as taking 9-12 units per semester. It is strongly recommended that you take no more than six units per semester if you are working while attending school.

Do you offer courses in the evening?

Most of our 500- level courses are offered in the evening and a variety of our 400-level courses begin at 4:00 p.m. or 7:00 p.m. Our program is well designed for students who work full- time or have other commitments during the day.

Are there any concentrations available?

Our program offers two concentrations: Public History (which includes digital and oral history focuses) and Chicana/o Studies.

What is the total number of units for the Master's degree in History?

The Master's Degree consists of thirty units or the equivalent of ten courses. This includes 18 units (6 classes) of 500 level graduate coursework and about 12 units (four classes) of electives. Electives are completed by taking a mix of 400-level courses with graduate augmentation and additional 500 level courses. Below information is generalized for conciseness.

All students must take the following 500 level courses:

- (1) History 501, History and Theory.
- (2) Two of the following Readings courses in which you explore major historical themes:
 - History 521T (Readings in European History)
 - History 541T (Readings in Non-West History)
 - History 551T (Readings in World History)
 - History 571T (Readings in American History)
- (3) One of the following history research seminar courses in which you use primary sources to write a well-crafted research paper:
 - History 522 (Seminar in European History)
 - History 542T (Seminar in Non-West History)
 - History 552T (Seminar in World History)
 - History 572 (Seminar in American History)
- (4) An additional two 500-level courses, which are usually attached to the student's exit option. There is a slight course variation in the Public History and Chicana/o Studies concentrations, (See p.8 for more information)

How do I complete my M.A. in History?

Each student will choose one of four tracks to complete their degree requirements. Below information is provided to give prospective students a general idea of the various options. Details regarding degree requirements and specific courses will be discussed with the program advisors and/or Graduate Coordinator.

See the following pages for more information on each option.

Option I: Master's with Comprehensive Exams

This is the most versatile option, preparing students for careers in academia, education, journalism, business, law, government, publishing, and non-profits. For this option you develop and demonstrate your mastery of two distinct, historical fields by taking two exams as you near completion of your coursework. This is an especially fitting culminating experience for our graduate students who are teaching at primary and secondary levels. The plan of study follows this format:

HIST 501 (Theory & History)	3 units
(1) 500 level Seminar course:	3 units
(2) 500 level Readings courses:	6 units
(2) 400/500 level Public/Digital/ Oral History course	6 units
(4) 400/500 level electives	12 units
Total	30 units

Option II: Master's with a Thesis

The thesis is a substantial research project that may also take the form of a scholarly article appropriate for journal submission. The topic will be mutually agreed upon by you and your thesis supervisor (also known as your thesis committee chair). Your last 6 units of 500 level courses (History 598 Thesis) are of a "phantom" nature. You do not meet in a formal classroom setting. Rather, you work independently on your thesis while meeting periodically with your thesis committee chair.

The thesis track is reserved for M.A. students who have attained at least a 3.4 GPA after the completion of 15 units and any relevant language training. History 596 (Internship) may not be used in calculating GPA for the thesis track. The GPA requirement may be waived by a formal written request from the history faculty member who will chair the student's thesis committee

Those who are self-driven and disciplined have the best chance of completing a thesis in a timely and scholarly manner. If you already have a possible topic you should gear your coursework towards that topic so you can build a body of material that will fit into your thesis down the road. In essence, you are working on your coursework and your thesis at the same time.

If you hope to enter the thesis track you should first make sure that there is a faculty member in the History department with expertise in your area of interest. Contact that professor prior to applying and make sure that new M.A. candidates for that field are being accepted. In some cases the professor with expertise may either have a full complement of students or be on faculty sabbatical. As noted above, only those who have demonstrated superior writing and research skills are allowed into the thesis track. The plan of study follows this format:

HIST 501 (Theory & History)	3 units
(1) 500 level Seminar course:	3 units
(2) 500 level Readings courses:	6 units
(2) 400/500 level Public/Digital/ Oral History course	6 units
(2) 400/500 level electives	6 units
HIST 598 (Thesis course)	6 units
Total	30 units

Option III: Master's with Public History Concentration

The Public History concentration prepares students to practice history in more public settings such as museums, libraries, archives, and classrooms. Specialized coursework includes at least one required internship. This concentration also has particular access to and support from CSUF's Center for Oral and Public History.

HIST 501 (Theory & History)	3 units
(1) 500 level Seminar course:	3 units
(2) 500 level Readings courses:	6 units
(2) 400/500 level Public/Digital/ Oral History course	6 units
(1-2) 400/500 level electives	3-6 units
And (1) of the below:
HIST 598 (Thesis course)	6 units
HIST 597 (Project course)	3-6 units
(2) Additional electives (Comp Exam option)	6 units
Total	30 units

Option IV: Master's with Chicana Concentration

The Chicana/a Studies concentration allows students to develop a deep, interdisciplinary understanding of the histories, art, literature, education, sociology, and theory of Chicana and Latina histories, contributions, and experiences. Specialized coursework includes a required Chicana/a Paradigms and Traditions course, and related electives. It is possible to pursue concentrations in Chicana and Oral/Public/Digital History simultaneously (not demonstrated in unit summary below).

HIST 501 (Theory & History)	3 units
(1) 500 level Seminar course:	3 units
(2) 500 level Readings courses:	6 units
(2) 400/500 level Public/Digital/ Oral History course	6 units
CHIC 500 ((Chicana/o Studies Paradigms)	3 units
(1-2) 400/500 level electives	3 units
And (1) of the below:
HIST 598 (Thesis course)	6 units
HIST 597 (Project course)	3-6 units
(2) Additional electives (Comp Exam option)	6 units
Total	30 units
